Narrator 1: One day Little White Duck decided to have a party for his friends.

Narrator 2: He said to himself:

Little White Duck: I wonder who will help me with my party. I'll go and ask Little Red Hen.

Narrator 1: And so he did. Would Little Red Hen help with the party?

Narrator 2: What do you think?

Little White Duck: Little Red Hen, will you help me with my party? Will you bring some napkins?

Little Red Hen: Yes, I will help you with your party, but I don't think the other animals will help. I know, because I have experience!

Narrator 1: Next, Little White Duck decided to ask his friend, Little Pink Pig, if he would help with the party.

Narrator 2: Little Pink Pig loves to eat at parties. Will he help?

Little White Duck: Little Pink Pig, will you help me with my party? Will you bring some cups?

Little Pink Pig: Yes, I would like to help you with your party. I have experience! I missed Little Red Hen's party.

Narrator 1: Next, Little White Duck decided to ask his friend, Little Yellow Chick, if she would help with the party.

Narrator 2: Little Yellow Chick is Little Red Hen's daughter. Do you think that she will help?

Little White Duck: Little Yellow Chick, will you help me with my party? Will you bring paper plates?

Little Yellow Chick: Yes, I would like to help you with your party. My mama says that it's not polite to say no. I have experience!

Narrator 1: Little White Duck decided to ask his friend, Little Tawny Turkey, if he would help with the party.

Narrator 2: Little Tawny Turkey has never been to a party. Do you think that he will help?

Little White Duck: Little Tawny Turkey, will you help me with my party? Will you help with the decorations?

Little Tawny Turkey: Yes, I would like to help you with your party, if you promise that it will not be on Thanksgiving. I have experience!

Narrator 1: Little White Duck decided to ask his friend, Little Gray Goose, if he would help with the party.

Narrator 2: Everyone knows that Little Gray Goose is a silly goose! Do you think that he will help with the party?

Little White Duck: Little Gray Goose, will you help me with my party? Will you make a map that shows the way to my house?

Little Gray Goose: Yes, I would like to help you with your party. No one has ever asked me to help. I don't have experience!

Narrator 1: Little White Duck has all the help he needs. The farmer's wife gave him a large bowl of grain and a tub of water for the party.

Narrator 2: Will everyone help? Will they remember what they are supposed to do?

Little Red Hen: Here I am with my napkins!

Little Pink Pig: Here I am with my cups!

Little Yellow Chick: Here I am with my paper plates!

Little Tawny Turkey: Here I am with my fluffy feather decorations!

Narrator 1: Someone is missing from the party!

Narrator 2: Who could it be?!

Little White Duck: Oh, no! Where is Little Gray Goose? He said that he would help with the party! Poor Little Gray Goose is not coming! He has never been to a party before. He does not have experience! What a silly goose!

Narrator 1: All of the guests at the party ate special grain, washed it down with water, and all agreed that it was a great party.

Narrator 2: They played a party game called The Farmer in the Dell and they ended the day with their favorite song, Old MacDonald Had a Farm. Of course, they had to leave Little Gray Goose out of the song!

Little White Duck : I am so happy with my party! Let's do it again next week. Maybe this time I'll draw a map for Little Gray Goose!

The End
